Geocashing

Urban nature walk

at

Volkspark Friedrichshain

Invitation 3

A colourful view

Look around. You are on top of on of the few hills in this city. Find a view that pleases you. You might look at the Berlin TV Tower located at Alexanderplatz but you also might have picked an utterly different perspective on this city.

Notice the beings and the objects in your sight. Notice that some of them are part of nature, the trees the bushes, the animals you might see. You probably see some man-made buildings further away from you. Notice how everything in your view is free to coexist in this urban environment. Now take a closer look at the colours you might see. Depending on the season or daytime you might see a very distinct mix of colours. Focus now on the colours in the back. What kinds of colors are part of the buildings which exist only since a few decades ? Think about where in nature you might come across these very colours… Apart from the colours you are seeing are there any other parts that are shared by the urban buildings and the beings of nature? Take a few minutes to think about how everything is influenced and intertwined by nature.

KulturNest e.V.
Placing Nature at the Centre of Culture in Europe

KulturNest e.V. is a Berlin-based non-profit organisation that believes in the power of bottom-up initiatives, creativity and civic participation to create meaningful social change. We design and facilitate learner-centred, non-formal educational experiences that connect people with one another, with nature and with their own capacity to shape the world around them. Our interdisciplinary team of artists, forest therapists, facilitators, youth workers and other practitioners works collaboratively with communities to create empowering spaces for learning, co-creation, wellbeing and social connection.